Drills will push the players and will be at a WHL level.

WHY:

This is an opportunity to get the more reps, more touches, and work on d specific game. With time tight in practice sessions players don't always get to work on the small things for their craft. This will give them the chance to improve on some of those and learn a few new skills as well. With the small numbers, the instructors can take the time to work with each player and make sure they understand the concepts. These drills and skills can make the difference in your game.
